Descendants of

JOSEPH THOMPSON and JENNET McCLELLAN, of Colrain, Mass.

This book is a record of the descendants of Joseph Thompson and Jennet McClellan, who were the first settlers of Colrain, Massachusetts. The first volume of the series was published in 1911 and was entitled "Ancestry of Joseph and Jennet Thompson of Colrain, Mass."

In the course of its preparation I have collected all of the Thompsons who have lived in Colrain, Massachusetts, and have traced their ancestry back to the first settlers of the town. I have also collected all of the descendants of the first settlers of Colrain, Massachusetts, who have lived in the town.

Four Generations of Thompsons

whose Immigrant Ancestors

Came from Ireland

and Settled in Colrain about 1760

The first settlers of Colrain, Massachusetts, were the Thompsons, who came from Ireland. They were the first settlers of the town, and they were the first settlers of the town.

Some of these Scotch-Irish immigrants came to America in 1715, including a number of the Thompsons. Some of the latter lived in the vicinity of Colrain, in 1760, and they were the first settlers of the town.

INTRODUCTION

This compilation is the second of a series on some of the Thompson families of Massachusetts, which are a by-product of a work on which I have been engaged for some years, a genealogy of the David Thompson family, of Thompson's Island and Mendon, Massachusetts, from whom I am descended. The first volume of the series was published in 1956 and was entitled "Descendants of James and Jennet Thompson, of Holden, Mass."

In the course of my research I have extracted all of the Thompson data from all of the published vital records of Massachusetts, have examined all of the earlier Thompson probate records in several counties of the State and have visited quite a number of cemeteries throughout Worcester County. In addition, I have accumulated considerable information from other sources.

The Town of Colrain, Mass., was of particular concern to me because of the known presence in that Town and the surrounding communities of descendants of the Mendon branch of the family and the difficulty in determining which of the Thompsons in Colrain were of the Mendon branch. This work deals only with those Thompsons whose ancestors first settled in Colrain, namely the descendants of Joseph and Jennet (McClellan) Thompson.

As far as is known, none of the Thompsons whose ancestors were among the original settlers of Mendon, Mass., descendants of David, of Thompson's Island in Massachusetts Bay, were related to the so-called Scotch-Irish Thompsons, either in Colrain or elsewhere. The Mendon Thompsons were of English origin.

Colrain, in Franklin County, Mass., about four miles from the Vermont border, was settled in 1738. It received its name from Coleraine, Ireland, from whence its first settlers came to America after they had fled from Scotland, during the reign of the Stewarts.

Some of these Scotch-Irish immigrants came to America in 1718, including a number of Thompsons. Some of the latter first settled in the vicinity of Holden, in what is now Worcester Co. in Massachusetts. Some settled in Londonderry, in what is now New Hampshire. Some time thereafter, some undoubtedly settled in Pelham, in what is now Hampshire County, Massachusetts.

Whether the ancestors of the Thompsons who first settled in Colrain were among these earlier immigrants is not known. It is most likely, however, that Joseph Thompson, the ancestor of most of the Thompsons in Colrain, came from Ireland in 1749.

Joseph may or may not have been related to John, Alexander and James Thompson, who were all among the early settlers in Colrain, but relationship, if any, has not been established. It is not unlikely that there was a relationship between the Colrain Thompsons and the Thompsons who settled in Pelham, Mass. at about the same time, but relationship has not been proven. It has long been the belief among members of the Thompson and the McClellan families that Joseph Thompson and his wife, who came to New England at different times but no evidence has been found to support or dispute that belief.

Although lacking positive proof, there is evidence that Joseph Thompson married Janet McClellan in the town of Hejara in the parish of Curran, about twenty miles south of Colrain, in Tipperary County, Ireland in 1748, where both families probably lived. It is believed that, a few months after the marriage of Joseph and Janet, both families set out for Boston, arriving there the same year.

They all probably spent the winter of 1748-1750 somewhere in the vicinity of Boston and reached the Connecticut Valley in the summer of 1750 and Joseph and Janet settled in Pelham, in which place he may have had relatives. Although Margaret, the eldest child, may have been born before reaching Pelham, it is quite probable that she and the succeeding four children were born in Pelham and that the family migrated to Colrain in the spring of 1750.

Meanwhile the McClellan family had settled in Colrain. In 1755, when the Indian depredations of the last of the Indian Wars began, many of the Colrain settlers moved their families to safer locations and the McClellan family went to Pelham and settled at Newfield where they remained until the conclusion of the Indian troubles and the capture of Quebec in 1759, the McClellans returned to Colrain, accompanied by the Thompsons. The first recorded deed of land in Colrain to Joseph Thompson, which was dated July 2, 1759, referred to him as "of Pelham".

Joseph Thompson made his will March 5, 1799. He died April 9, 1803, in Colrain, at the age of 53 years. His will was probated May 3, 1803. It was witnessed by Jonathan McGee, Michael McClellan and Jane McClellan. Hugh McClellan was named Executor. The will named his wife Jenny; his daughter John, daughter Mary, son Joseph, daughter Martha, son Hugh, daughter Margaret, daughter Anna, son David and son William; his nephews (etc.) David Wilson, Margaret Wilson, Robert Wilson, John Wilson and Jenny Wilson. The latter, called nephews in his will, were the children of his eldest daughter Margaret, who had married David Wilson in 1772 and died in 1795 before Joseph made his will.

In assembling in this manner the data that I have compiled on this branch of the Thompson family, it is my intention only to assure that this data, which has not, to my knowledge, been otherwise published, may be made available to others who may be interested in this family. Although undoubtedly not perfect, I believe this record to be as complete and accurate as possible with currently established facts. Because my research involved only those bearing the name Thompson, this work deals with the descendants of Joseph Thompson in the male line only. If any mistakes are found herein, I trust that they may be of minor importance.

I would be remiss were I not to acknowledge the assistance and cooperation I have had from several persons in the compilation of the data contained herein. My thanks are hereby expressed to Mrs. Mary Ellen Alexander, daughter of the late Judge Francis H. Thompson, who made available to me the extensive data compiled by her father, and also to Mrs. Marion D. Saylor, a descendant of John and Jane McClellan (Miller) Saylor. And most particularly do I express my thanks and appreciation to Mr. Hugh H. McClellan, descendant of the immigrants Michael and Jane (Henry) McClellan, who not only aided me by furnishing me with much data but also reviewed all of my genealogical data to assure as complete accuracy as possible.

1. The first part of the paper is devoted to a review of the literature on the topic of the role of the state in the development of the economy. It is found that the state has played a significant role in the development of the economy in many countries, particularly in the case of developing countries. The state has been able to mobilize resources, create infrastructure, and provide social services, all of which have contributed to economic growth and development.
